

Satellite radio is revolutionary in the radio generation. To limit Satellite radio by taking away local traffic and weather is absolutely absurd. Unfortunately huge media conglomerates think that there listener base will suffer because of the superiority of Satellite Radio. The last I knew America was a free country and a free market. America's free market system thrives on competition. If the local radio stations think that they are being threatened by Satellite Radio then they should make their service more appealing to the listener so that the listener will not have a reason to listen to Satellite Radio and/or its local traffic and weather. For the FCC to limit the growth of Satellite Radio would be a major disservice to its constituents, which is America, and would lose the credibility it has worked hard to attain. I hope that the FCC makes the right decision and lets Satellite Radio continue its growth and continue to let America be a free a democratic society in every aspect of its free market system.
